6 Steps to Market Readiness

or

Get Your Act Together before it's too late!

Read the papers... listen to the news...observe what is happening all around you. These days no one is safe from the effects of a potential or real job loss! You must prepare for this possibility. Doing so will ensure a stronger position of readiness should (and when) it happens to you!

Learn New Skills - Show you're flexible, adaptable to change and willing to learn new skills and take on additional responsibilities. Building your repertoire of skills and talents NOW while you still have a job will make you more indispensable to your present company and more marketable to other companies. Take classes, learn on the job, step out of your comfort zone and learn something new!

Build a Financial Reserve - Start saving as much as possible, ideally have 8-12 months of living expenses saved in the event you lose your job. Don't make career decisions out of financial distress.

Update Your Resume - Include all new skills, recent job history and ensure accomplishments are up to date. Present yourself to catch the attention of future hiring managers by noting your skills and talents in a way that shows you're results and bottom line oriented.

Re-Energize & Build Out Your Network - Now is the time to reconnect with folks you haven't talked to in awhile, and get involved with professional organizations to connect with new people in your field. Start volunteering to make additional contacts outside your professional circles.

Practice Interviewing - A friend told me that she goes on an interview every 6 months whether she wants the job or not just to keep her interviewing skills sharp. She wants to be sure the job she really wants isn't the first interview she has gone on in 10 years!

Hire a Career Coach to help you take control of your career, not leave it in someone else's hands! Now you have the money to get the help. ACT NOW!
